Hastings Trespass Case

The trespass case of Edward E. Hastings of Fryeburg against O. K. Day and David H. Green of Harrison was opened Tuesday afternoon at 10 o'clock in the court of Judge Hugh W. Hastings and Alton C. Wheeler for the plaintiff. It was the contention of the plaintiff that the defendants trespassed on land belonging to him while duck hunting on Lower Kears Lake in Lovell the fall of 1931. The meadow question had been posed by Mr. Hastings to avoid a fire hazard and create a game refuge for ducks and other birds. Mr. Hastings claimed that the land was part of mainland, while Mr. Day and Green contended that it is part of the lake. Waldo Seavey of Lovell had been appointed by the court to make a survey of the land and an explanation of blueprints showing that the elevation of the meadow or bog for some distance from one to four feet above mean level of the lake. The court went to Lovell Wednesday afternoon and viewed the land. Upon their return the case was read with a cross examination of Seavey and deposition of Edmond Weston, a surveyor familiar with the land. On Thursday George C. a naturalist, was on the stand describing the plant life, the formation of the land in vicinity. The jury rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff. Damages of $1.00 being awarded on the counts against Mr. Green and one against Mr. Day.

THE LANDING OF THE PILGRIMS

Follia Hemans

The breaking waves dashed high On a stern and rock-bound coast, And the woods against a stormy sky Their giant branches tossed.

And the heavy night hung dark The hills and waters o'er,
When a band of exiles moored their bark On the wild New England shore.

Not as the conqueror comes,
They, the true-hearted came;
Not with the roll of the stirring drums,
And the trumpet that sings of fame.

Not as the flying come,
In silence and in fear;
They shook the depths of the desert gloom With their hymns of lofty cheer.

Amid the storm they sang,
And the stars heard, and the sea;
And the sounding aisles of the dim woods rang To the anthem of the free!

The ocean eagle soared
From his nest by the white wave's foam;
And the rocking pines of the forest roared,
This was their welcome home!

There were men with hoary hair, Amid that pilgrim band;
Why had they come in wither there, Away from their childhood's land?

There was woman's fearless eye, Lit by her deep love's truth;
There was manhood's brow serenely high,
And the very heart of youth.

What sought they thus afar?
Bright jewels of the mine?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of war?
They sought a faith's pure shrine.

Ah! call it holy ground,
The soil where first they trod;
They have left unstained what there they found, Freedom to worship God.

THE FIRST SNOW-FALL

James Russell Lowell

The snow had begun in the gloaming, And hushly all the night Had been heaping field and highway With a silence deep and white.

Every pine and fir and hemlock Wore ermine too dear for an earl,
And the poorest twig on the elm-tree Was ridged inch deep in pearl.

From sheds new-roofed with Car-rara Came Chanticleer's muffled crow, The still ralls softened to swan's-down And still fluttered down the snow.

I stood and watched by the window
The noiseless work of the sky,
And the sudden furies of snow-birds, Like brown leaves whirling by.

I thought of a mound in Sweet Auburn Where a little headstone stood;
How the flakes were folding it gently, As did the robins the babes in the wood.

Up spoke our own little Mabel, Saying, "Father, who makes the snow?"
And I told of the good All-Father Who cares for us here below.

Again I looked at the snow-fall, And thought of the leaden sky That arched o'er our first great sorrow, When that mound was heaped so high.

I remembered the gradual patience That fell from that cloud-like snow, Flake by flake, healing and hiding The scar that renewed our woe.

And again to the child I whispered,
"The snow that husheth all, Darling, the merciful Father Alone can make it fall!"

Then, with eyes that saw not, I Kissed her;
And she, kissing back, could not know That my kiss was given to her sister.

Folded close under deepening snow,

A STITCH IN TIME SAVES NINE

by W. B. Krueck

Formerly Professor Animal Husbandry, Purdue University

Many flocks of pullets seem to be very badly infested with worms and parasites this particular fall. Although some of these pullet flocks may look relatively thrifty at the present time, worm infestations are working upon them, lowering their vitality, and as they go into egg production with some added drain upon their bodies for egg production, it is bound to lower their vitality and weaken them further. When cold weather strikes pullets of this kind, they have very little resistance, go into moult quickly, and because of low vitality have a difficult time getting back into production.

Many people, in examining a flock for worm infestation, look only at the birds about ready to die. In most cases a bird of this kind will show no symptoms of a worm infestation to any great extent. In examining the birds, select a bird that has considerable flesh upon it, one that might possibly be fit to dress for consumption. Then take the intestinal tract and open it from the gizzard to the fecal pouches. If a worm infestation is present, it will be found in a bird of this kind.

Even though the infestation may be rather light, most poultrymen will find it desirable to give the birds a good worm treatment and thereby maintain their vitality. If the treatment is delayed and the worm infestation seems to increase, it will be more difficult for the flock to overcome the ravages of these parasites and production will be more severely affected as cold weather comes in. For all flocks that are being used for hatchery purposes, it is doubly important that the birds be free from parasites in order that the greatest vigor and vitality may be obtained in these flocks.

Many flocks of pullets seem to be very badly infested with worms and parasites this particular fall. Although some of these pullet flocks may look relatively thrifty at the present time, worm infestations are working upon them, lowering their vitality, and as they go into egg production with some added drain upon their bodies for egg production, it is bound to lower their vitality and weaken them further. When cold weather strikes pullets of this kind, they have very little resistance, go into moult quickly, and because of low vitality have a difficult time getting back into production.

Many people, in examining a flock for worm infestation, look only at the birds about ready to die. In most cases a bird of this kind will show no symptoms of a worm infestation to any great extent. In examining the birds, select a bird that has considerable flesh upon it, one that might possibly be fit to dress for consumption. Then take the intestinal tract and open it from the gizzard to the fecal pouches. If a worm infestation is present, it will be found in a bird of this kind.

Even though the infestation may be rather light, most poultrymen will find it desirable to give the birds a good worm treatment and thereby maintain their vitality. If the treatment is delayed and the worm infestation seems to increase, it will be more difficult for the flock to overcome the ravages of these parasites and production will be more severely affected as cold weather comes in. For all flocks that are being used for hatchery purposes, it is doubly important that the birds be free from parasites in order that the greatest vigor and vitality may be obtained in these flocks.

The attitude of the chain stores in regard to observance of Armistice Day leads us to submit the following sentiment which appeared in nearly the same form in a recent issue of a publication of nation-wide circulation: "Until the chain store identifies itself more closely with the small town's general welfare; until it shoulders and carries its legitimate share of the community burden; until each local branch can fall in line with local practices without having to ask the New York office first; until the chain store becomes an active, permanent and integral part of its town, and takes a loyal and genuine interest in the upbuilding of its community; until it acknowledges the fact that it owes something to the town which patronizes it; it has no just claim to local patronage, to say nothing of public respect."

Many a man who says "I do my best" really doesn't. This also fits the people who proclaim, "We do our part."

It has been a long time since the Citizen has recorded much about accidents at the Mason corner. Two or three years ago two signals were placed east of the corner and since that time there have been few accidents involving cars coming from that direction. One signal was installed to warn traffic in the opposite direction, and a dozen or more cars each year continue to crash in the ditch or against a pole when they fail to complete the turn.

We admit that, as yet, no fatalities have occurred at this point, and some time has passed since anyone has suffered serious injury, but the fact remains that danger exists there. When the road is coated with ice the curve is not safe at any speed, and at any other time the condition of the road is such that it is very deceptive to one not familiar with it.

We wonder if the State is waiting for someone to be killed here before making any move toward improvement.

After properly returns may we expect a movement to pension the veterans of the C. C. C. Boston

KIDS AND GUNS from Bridgton News

It always makes the cold shiver run up and down our back when we see a kid with a gun and we can't help wondering what a parent is thinking of when he allows it. The other day we met a couple of kids on the Tannery Bridge, each with a small rifle. We jumped to the conclusion that they were going off into the woods after small game and just to be funny we inquired if they had a hunting license. We got the raspberry from both. They maintained that they did not have to have a license—"cause they were not old enough." They seemed so cocksure of themselves that we did not care to enter

France Sends More Felons Into Exile

This rare photograph shows French felons, sentenced to imprisonment on the penal islands off the coast of South America, being transported from the wharf at Marseilles to the prison ship La Rochelle for the dreary journey and banishment. Some 200 of the most desperate of malefactors against French law were rounded up for the sea voyage, being the first contingent of French criminals so honored in more than two years.

Into an argument right then and there for the reason that we have become lost many times in the labyrinthian mazes of the fish and game laws. As a matter of fact no kid under sixteen years of age is allowed in the woods and fields or upon the waters of the state, with firearms, without a hunting license, unless actually accompanied by parent or guardian. By the same token a kid under 16 is not granted a license unless his application is accompanied by the written consent of the parent and guardian.
The general statute law of the state goes even further than that.
It forbids any person to sell, give away or to furnish to any child under 16 years of age any firearm or dangerous weapon—except under very specific provisions. Not only that, but the statute forbids the selling or giving away to any child under 14 years of age any air rifle and there are no exceptions to that prohibition. But law or no law kids under sixteen years of age are too young to be entrusted with firearms, both for their own sakes and for the safety of others, and it is up to the parents to see that they do not have them.

The ability to progress is based on one's recognition of the imperfection in his work. As long as one cannot see the imperfections there is no hope of progress. As long as the imperfection may be seen and there remains desire and energy to correct them one has hope of progress.

THE DEATH CLARE

In a Kentucky cemetery there is a grave stone erected for P. H.
Nolan, Assistant State Game Warden.
After reciting the facts of his career, it is stated on the marble, "The accident was caused by the glaring lights of a passing automobile."

The time is coming soon, says the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, when glaring lights will be outlawed.
Many municipalities, and some states, are prescribing rules for the regulation of the lights.

In a recent survey conducted by the Travelers Insurance Company, it is set forth that from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. in 1932, there were 469,100 accidents in which 12,500 persons were killed, or 32 for every 1,000 accidents. From 6 p. m. to 6 a. m. there were 330,200 accidents, but 15,500 deaths, or 46 per 1,000. In other words, the death rate per accident was 43.7 per cent worse during darkness than in daylight.
The figures would have been still more unfavorable if they had started at 5 p. m. instead of 6 p. m., particularly in winter.

Automobile accidents during dark and darkness are more likely to result in serious injuries and death because vision is reduced by inadequate illumination and because headlight glare from approaching cars momentarily blinds drivers.

Engineering societies are working out devices to prevent direct rays of headlights from striking eyes of motorists, the object being to reduce the "glare hazard" to a minimum. If this problem can be solved, an important contribution to safety will have been made.

We have frequently heard people say things would have been better now if the United States had not come into the war. How do they know they would be better? How can they tell what things would be like? It is just possible they would be worse than they are now.

ARE SAVINGS NO LONGER SAFE

The mania for originating new tax methods to pay for governmental extravagance reached a peak in New York City with a proposal to pick out a handful of businesses for a new brand of class taxation. The financial, real estate, insurance, savings bank and public utility worlds were astounded.

The proposal would tax life insurance, "one quarter of one per cent of such portion of the value of its total capital, investment and gross assets as shown by its books as its receipts on account of policies of insurance in the City of New York bear to its total receipts."

This is inequitable taxation of funds held in trust for millions of people.

The great proportion of life insurance policyholders are persons of small means. Life insurance is often their only safeguard for families and dependents. But politicians point to the accumulated savings of these small policyholders pooled in an insurance company and say, "Let's tax this rich corporation." They do not tell the people that such a plan is an antislavery method of destroying savings of the masses.

Supposing other cities and states adopted the tax proposed in New York City. What would happen to the savings of the nation?
One hesitates to conjecture.

Have we reached a point where no investment is sacred; where politicians can confiscate private funds to fill public treasuries which their mad schemes have depleted?
Unless such class legislation and confiscatory taxation of private savings and investments, are stopped in this nation, private property rights, that great heritage of American citizens, will have disappeared.

Thirteen persons were killed and 102 injured in 134 motor vehicle accidents during October investigated by the State Highway Police in Maine.

12.7% OF FARM INCOME GOES TO PAY TAXES

In summarizing a report on a study of farm property taxation in Maine, Charles H. Merchant, head of the Department of Agricultural Economics, University of Maine, says: "The average tax levied on apple farms included in the study during 1924 to 1926 amounted to 20.52% of the farm income; on blueberry farms in 1926, to 10.83%; on dairy farms in 1927, to 15.92%; on potato farms in Aroostook County for the three-year period 1928 to 1930, to 12.54%; on potato farms in Central Maine for the two years 1929 and 1930, to 8.58%; and on poultry farms in 1930, to 8.46%.
The average property tax on the 422 farms included in the study amounted to 12.70% of the farm income. This shows the tax burden of the farmer in the principal agricultural regions of the State during various periods from 1924 to 1930."

Now I want to tell a real story. For a long time it has known that bears are getting cous as the killing of many in town has proven. One day the telephone rang and capture of a bear was an-statement, and the evidence ed the fact. The monster ed almost 400 pounds. When z down he was over six feet and with legs outstretched dared nine feet in length. His were the length of your little r and his claws over three feet. With one blow of his paw could kill a man as easily as a could a tiny mouse. Sheep or

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

Armistice. "The eleventh month, the eleventh day, the eleventh hour. Let us not forget, lest we forget."

Sunday morning, Nov. 12—Some after midnight the ground was covered with a warm blanket of pure white. Everything looks beautiful in its ermine robe.

Mrs. Verna Davis spent several of the past week at the home of Miss Dorris Houston, of Dover.

Mrs. Edith Brown of Bryant's was a recent guest of her sister, Mrs. Gerald Davis at the home.

Harry Silver has gone into the woods near Black Mountain where he will work with his brother for Benson Brothers this winter.

Paul Hendrickson has recently cleared another large logging camp on the back side of "Old Molocou" which he will use in connection with the one at the foot of the mountain.

Mr. Andrews of South Woodstock and Freddie Briggs of West Paris are now attending the Maine State of Commerce at Lewiston.

The Parisians, our local musicians, will furnish music for dances held by the Legion boys at Locke Mills this present season.

Armistice Ball was largely attended.

There has been a wonderful time in Fall work. Men are now in the fields plowing and getting out in preparation for another year's crops. It is almost impossible to dampen the courage of the farmer. Try and try again.

Mr. and Mrs. Gayden G. Davis are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby daughter on Monday, Nov. 8. Mother and child are being cared for by Mrs. Harry Page of Bryant Pond.

Deer hunters have been hunting the past week but again failed to report that up to this time, few deer have been seen.

At week I reported a bear shot by Greenwood Hills. I wish to make a correction. The bear was on Curtis Hill, this town, and a nice one about two years old and very nice eating as shown in the photograph through the generosity of Bonnie Benson, who captured it.

Now I want to tell a real story. For a long time it has been known that bears are getting dangerous as the killing of many in town has proven. One day while the telephone rang and a capture of a bear was announced. "A huge monster" was the statement, and the evidence of the fact. The monster weighed almost 400 pounds. When he was over six feet tall and with legs outstretched he was five feet in length. His ears were the length of your little finger and his claws over three inches. With one blow of his paw he could kill a man as easily as a cat could a mouse. Sheep or cattle could never get away from his brutal attacks. This monster was captured right in South Woodstock on Davis Hill by Lewis Hadley of West Paris, who has always followed the life of a hunter.

Week end and Sunday guests at Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mundy's were Miss Alice Mundy from Worcester, Mass., Dr. Anson Kendall and his cousin, Leslie Kendall, from Everett, Mass., and John Silver and family from Gorham.

Night Life For Chickens—Poultrymen Find It Pays

WHILE night life may be hard on human beings, it is fine for chickens—at least it pays the poultryman well. Investigators have found out that fowls must have long hours to lay well; hence, lengthening the day with electric lights during the winter months is advisable.

Given a 12-14 hour working day from October to April, hens eat more feed and lay more eggs. Rarely is the cost of such lighting so excessive that profits do not result from the practice.

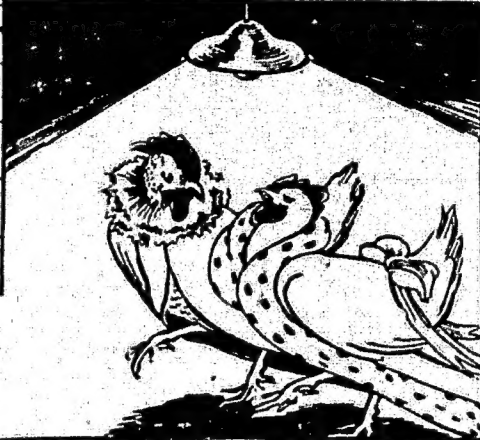

Recent studies at the National Institute of Poultry Husbandry, England, by Dr. R. T. Parkhurst, now poultry specialist for National Oil Products Company, show that

It is best to run the lights for a few hours both morning and evening because it keeps the hens on their regular summer schedule. However, where it is more convenient or economical the lights can be used only in the morning or only in the evening.

Furthermore, both American and British investigators have shown that hens over a year old do best when given light all night. Apparently when hens get older, they can stand more night life.

Birds in heavy lay need cod-liver oil in the ration; preferably an oil fortified with additional cod-liver oil vitamins, a tested concentrated source of vitamin D being very desirable. Short days mean fewer curative rays from the sun, but artificial illumination and the "anti-rachitic" factor of cod-liver oil will adequately substitute for lack of sunshine.

DEERING IS MADE DEAN AT MAINE AG. COLLEGE

Arthur L. Deering, director of the Extension Service, has been appointed dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Maine succeeding Dr. Leon S. Merrill, who died September 3, it was announced by President Harold S. Boardman, following a meeting of the Board of Trustees, Friday evening, Nov. 10.

Deering will continue as director of the Extension Service in addition to his new duties as dean. With his appointment, it is believed, Maine has the youngest dean of any agricultural college in the country. Commenting upon the appointment, President Boardman said, "It is strictly an example of the position seeking the man."

After graduating from the University of Maine in 1912, Deering became the first county agent in Kennebec County, a position he retained until 1920. In 1920 he returned to the University to become county agent leader. This latter position he held until 1930 when he was made assistant director of the Extension Service. The following year, 1931, he became director of the Extension Service following the resignation of Dr. Merrill.

Though widely known among Maine's citizens, Deering is perhaps best known among the agricultural leaders of the state because of his ten years of service as secretary of the Maine Farm Bureau Federation. His father, A. M. Deering of Denmark, was a member of the agricultural committee in the 82nd Maine legislature.

Mrs. Deering, an accomplished musician, given considerable time to community activities through the church, the Women's Club, and the Girl Scout organization. There are three girls and a boy in the family.

Someone has said that no man knows how honest he is until he is tempted.

Every depression brings with it a new set of economies for business and the individual. Those who hold on to the economies after the depression will profit by them. Those who forget these economies, and revert back to former wasteful standards will not profit because of the depression. The lesson, to do any good, must stay learned.

DR. BERRY TO PRESENT PASSION PLAY AT M. E. CHURCH MONDAY EVE

You may enjoy a real treat at the Methodist Church next Monday evening at eight o'clock. Dr. Ira Berry will give his unique presentation of the world famous Oberammergau Passion Play. Dr. Berry has been giving his presentation for six consecutive seasons and has never had one disappointed audience. He will show wonderful pictures, colored by the best artists, and will impersonate the leading characters. After this presentation you will feel as if you have seen and heard the actors give the great drama. Not only has Dr. Berry studied carefully at Oberammergau but he has spent much time in Palestine thus giving an Oriental background for this presentation. After the showing of the Passion Play at Augusta recently, Rev. Cymbril Hughes, pastor of the Green Street Methodist Church wrote: "Dr. Berry's presentation of The Passion Play profoundly impressed our people this evening. The wonderful coloring of the pictures combined with Dr. Berry's marvelous tones in impersonating the characters on the screen made a perfect symphony. We lost all sense of witnessing a picture. We felt that we were spectators of the Great Tragedy. The atmosphere throughout was intensely reverent and worshipping."

Last Saturday Maine's death toll of human beings during deer-hunting season reached ten, within one of last year's.

MRS. HERBERT L. WATSON

The many friends of Mrs. Alice Hicks Watson, wife of Herbert L. Watson of Gilead were saddened to hear of her death which occurred suddenly at her home on Tuesday morning, Nov. 7. Mrs. Watson had been an invalid for many years and for the past ten years had been confined to her bed with rheumatism. She was as well as usual that morning, passing away soon after complaining of a severe pain in the head.

Mrs. Watson was born in Gilead in 1871, the daughter of the late Benjamin and Elizabeth Wight Hicks. She attended the schools of her native town, and after the family moved to South Paris attended South Paris High School. The family later returned to Gilead where, on June 17, 1897, she became the wife of Mr. Watson. As long as her health permitted she was an active worker in the Union Congregational Church of Gilead.

During her long illness she has been a patient sufferer, and her many visitors have found in her Christian life a source of comfort and inspiration.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Edith Robbins of Stafford Springs, Conn., and Miss Mabel P. Hicks of Beverly, Mass. Funeral services were held at the Gilead church on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. William Sinclair of Gorham, N. H., officiating. Interment was in the Lary Cemetery on the south side of the river.
